PEOPLE MAKE PASSAGE OF REFERENDUM BILL

CITIZENS CIRCULATE PETITION FOR ADOPTION OF PUBLIC OPINION MEASURE.

House Bill No. 242, now before the Legislature, known as the Public Opinion Bill, is receiving much attention throughout the State. This bill passed the House last year, but was killed without a roll-call on the third reading in the Senate. It was more or less similar here before the last six Legislatures, and while there is a determined opposition to the measure in certain quarters, there is an increasing interest in it and sympathy with its purposes on the part of the people in general.

The principle of the referendum has been an established part of our representative democratic institutions. Massachusetts led in this movement when in 1778 she provided for a referendum vote on the adoption of the Constitution, this being the first referendum vote ever taken. This referendum principle has been adopted by all the States, but Indiana in the making and amending of its Constitution, and is gradually being extended to such important state laws as determine questions of public policy. Four States have adopted referendum provisions in their State Constitutions, and another promises well to become the fifth during the present year.

The proposal now before the Massachusetts Legislature, however, is not of this nature. The bill before the House provides for an advisory referendum only, such as is now operative in the State of Illinois, Chicago, Detroit and many other cities have taken votes upon the advisory referendum, that demonstrate its usefulness and prove the interest and intelligence of the people in acting directly upon public questions.

Referendum on Car Tracks.

A good example of the referendum vote is that which was taken in the matter of car tracks on Tremont street, Boston. When the Boston subway was projected the street railway companies agreed to take up their tracks on Tremont street, and did so, but afterwards they went to the Legislature and asked for authority to relay their tracks on Tremont street. The Legislature granted them this privilege notwithstanding the fact that there was a strong public sentiment against it, but Governor Wolcott vetoed the act of the Legislature and declared that he would not sign such a measure until it contained a clause providing for a referendum vote by the people of Boston. Such a clause was inserted in the act, which was repassed by the Legislature, and the question then went to the people, who voted overwhelmingly against the measure that the Legislature had passed.

If there had happened to be a Governor in the chair in sympathy with the corporation, or if the corporation had happened to have a two-thirds majority in the Legislature to pass the measure over the Governor's veto, the people of Boston would not have been able to defend themselves against this measure, and the corporation would have had its way.

The Public Opinion Bill now before the Legislature provides for a referendum for an expression of the popular will on a specific question only when a petition calling for it has been signed by 10 per cent. of the certified voters. The bill provides furthermore for the operation of this referendum not only in Commonwealth, but also in any county, city or township where this condition is complied with.

Indorsed by Labor Men.

The measure has been indorsed by labor unions representing 100,000 workmen throughout the State, and by a number of grangers and other organizations.

A citizens' petition calling for the passage of this bill is now being circulated. Blank copies can be obtained by addressing the secretary of the Massachusetts Referendum League, No. 5 Park square, Boston, Mass.

NEWPORT, R. I., Jan. 28.—The thrilling rescue of twelve manacled prisoners from the burning detention building and the removal of ammunition stores from the side of the burning building were the features of the worst fire that ever visited the United States training station here. Fifteen hundred marines, called from all over the State, and a large number of volunteers, were on duty when the fire broke out. The fire started in the detention building and was discovered by Private John Kelly, who was on guard. It was almost midnight when the alarm was given. The fire spread rapidly, and the inmates of the building were ordered to evacuate. The firemen fought the fire for several hours, but it was not until the Hercules fire engine arrived that the fire was brought under control. The firemen worked for several hours, and the fire was finally extinguished. The damage to the building was extensive, and the loss of the prisoners was a great one.

Every Possible Move Being Considered Before Next Step Is Taken—Likely an Appeal Will Be Made to U. S. Supreme Court.

Counsel for Charles L. Tucker, convicted of the murder of Mabel Page, and now under sentence of death, are to day considering the next step in their fight for his life. It appears perfectly possible that this will be an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States.

James H. Vahey, senior counsel for Tucker, said today to a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN:

"Every possible thing that the human brain can devise, every possible act that it is within the power of his counsel to perform, will be exerted in behalf of Charles Louis Tucker."

In the event of an appeal to the United States Supreme Court and of a favorable result, the fight for Tucker's freedom as well as his life will be made; but should the matter first be laid before Governor Guild and clemency asked, it will be a last desperate effort to save Tucker from the execution of the death sentence, which is set for the week of June 10.

Behind these two possibilities there is one other—appeal to the State Legislature. In the event of a favorable result, the fight for Tucker's freedom as well as his life will be made; but should the matter first be laid before Governor Guild and clemency asked, it will be a last desperate effort to save Tucker from the execution of the death sentence, which is set for the week of June 10.

Tucker Still Hopeful.

Mr. Vahey today declined to make any statement further than that Tucker is now being considered in all the phases of the case, and that it is possible that the case will be taken up by the State Legislature.

"Circumstantial Evidence."

In view of the fact that the bill is based on circumstantial evidence—it is now in the hands of the committee on Judiciary—the expression of Judge Sherman in regarding Tucker is regarded of peculiar interest. Judge Sherman said:

"The evidence is circumstantial, and it is not sufficient to sustain a conviction. The evidence is circumstantial, and it is not sufficient to sustain a conviction. The evidence is circumstantial, and it is not sufficient to sustain a conviction."

SPIRITS PROCLAIM
TUCKER'S INNOCENCE

Two spiritistic mediums, one in Boston and one in Lynn, declare that Tucker is innocent, and by making the announcement, they are creating intense excitement.

Jordan Hall was packed when the Rev. Frederick A. Wiggin, of Unity Church, after preaching that he did not want to be asked about the Tucker case, declared in a loud voice:

"I will tell you now, and for all that I have received assurance from the spirit world that Mabel Page came to her death in a little porch."

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST
80 AND 82 SUMNER ST., BOSTON, JANUARY 29, 1906.

Who Wrote the Babson Opinion on Municipal Ownership?

It seems to be an established custom in Massachusetts for public officials, to whom questions may be put concerning our public service, to refer such questions to the corporations involved, or their attorneys, and turn in their replies to the Legislature, City Council, or other public authority that may be interested.

Years ago when the Boston & Albany lease was under discussion in the Legislature it was charged that secret rebates were given representing discounts all the way from 10 to 75 per cent. from the published tariff.

The legislative committee asked the Railroad Commission for information on this subject. The commission, after a time, turned in a report stating that discounts were given as stated, and presented the matter in explanation and excuse.

A question was raised as to who had written the report, and it transpired that the Railroad Commissioners, not knowing anything themselves, and not deeming it necessary to go to such unusual lengths as to make an investigation of their own, transmitted the question to the Boston & Albany Railroad, received and adopted the report made by the attorney of the road and turned it over to the Legislature as a report from the commission.

The question arises whether the city attorney has been following this precedent by allowing the attorney for the Electric Lighting Company to write the opinion on the municipal lighting order which was sent to the Mayor from the Corporation Counsel's office?

Anyone who will read the opinion carefully will find abundant internal evidence suggesting the above question.

It is certain that if the attorney for the Electric Company had written the report it could not have been worded more cunningly to mislead people in regard to the effect of the vote now pending in the City Council, or the difficulties in the way of establishing a municipal lighting plant.

Whatever may have been the evolution of the Municipal Lighting Opinion, it is clear that it is eminently satisfactory to the lighting interests and their beneficiaries and others who are opposed to municipal ownership.

It is the most cunning sort of argument because it selects certain things which are true, but presents them in a way to mislead out of their proper relation to other facts which are entirely omitted, and which, if stated, would very greatly modify the conclusion likely to be drawn, in fact reverses this conclusion in the minds of unprejudiced and thoughtful men.

Go Ahead, France— Thrash Venezuela

The United States Doesn't Care Much for Castro Exposed Loomis

Those who are surprised to find that the Monroe Doctrine has sprung a leak are invited to remember some facts in connection with Venezuela. They may do away with the surprise.

Our brave President has told us that the Monroe Doctrine, newly varnished and painted, with a modern extension added by himself, would never even be looked at, much less interfered with, by foreign powers.

But he has just given permission to France to go ahead and thrash little Venezuela and collect the claims she thinks she has against that small republic.

The milk in that cocoanut, kind friends, is this:

Castro, President of Venezuela, forgot himself strangely when he exposed that beautiful American diplomat, Mr. Loomis.

Loomis was engaged in making a fortune in Venezuela. He also engaged in the pastime of blackguarding and attacking Bowen, the American representative of real merit—and, as it turned out, of REAL COURAGE.

The scheme to disgrace Bowen and exalt Loomis—who had wormed his way into the Department of State, much to the disgust of the late John Hay—fell flat, BECAUSE CASTRO ENABLED BOWEN TO SHOW THAT, AMONG LOOMIS'S OTHER ASSETS, THERE WAS A TEN THOUSAND DOLLAR CHECK FROM THE ASPHALT TRUST.

Taft stultified himself to the extent of deciding against Bowen, and drove out of the service a man of whom the country could be proud.

But the indignation of the public proved a little too strong for the combination trying to build up Mr. Loomis, and that gentleman had to go.

The facts have not been forgotten, however. THEREFORE MR. CASTRO, OF VENEZUELA, SUDDENLY DISCOVERS THAT THE MONROE DOCTRINE ROOF HAS BEEN JERKED AWAY FROM HIS HEAD, AND HE IS LEFT LOOKING UP AT THE THUNDERS AND LIGHTNING OF FRANCE.

He isn't worrying much, however—because it happens that some French gentlemen in Venezuela were in about as disgraceful a position as Loomis when, according to his own confession, he was scheming down there to make several millions of dollars.

Castro has some interesting documents concerning the beautiful United States representatives whom Bowen exposed. And he has some others concerning the French.

We are inclined to think that when all this blows over you will find that our State Department, in its anger at Castro, told France to go ahead, AND THAT FRANCE WILL DO NOTHING.

By the way, this is as good a place as any to repeat that the late John Hay's illness was aggravated—and his death probably hastened—by the fact that he was powerless to protest against Loomis's presence in the State Department.

JOHN HAY FELT DISGRACED BY HIS INABILITY TO PUT OUT AND TO DENOUNCE SO UNWORTHY A MAN AS LOOMIS.

That is a fact, and no member of John Hay's family will be found publicly to DENY it.

Some think that the recent Administration desire to put young ship was partly a case of remorse and of a desire to make atonement to the Hay family. It certainly was a fine thing for so young a boy to give him a place requiring age and experience.

But we don't think that even that present to Hay's son-in-law would secure for Mr. Taft or any one else a certificate of character, as regards the Loomis matter, from the Hay family.

We should like those who are devoting their lives to apologizing for that disgraceful Loomis affair to TRY to see if they can get any official statement from the Hay family to the effect that John Hay was not harassed, worried and humiliated by the Loomis incident up to the hour of his death.

She Points Out the Dangers of the American
Hotel and Its Terror-Striking Bill of Fare
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1906, by Atlantic Journal Examiner

Montereg, Jamaica, W. I.
THE menu of the American hotel has always been a thing of terror to me.

With a dozen meals, half a dozen soups, all the fish of all the seas, rivers and lakes, all the animals of the earth together with every condiment—saucy, entire and dessert—invented by epicure, gourmand and fiend, the average American hotel bill of fare suggests Noah's ark, ready for embarkation.

As for the table d'hôte at these hotels, it is like nothing so much as a department store, and the poor human stomach is the bargain counter, where "rack-and-roll" goods are tossed in an indigestible heap.

Yet these are the things we call the "luxuries of civilization," and then we complain that "digestion" is with diseases, and the money left over from paying for Noah's Ark goes to pay the doctor.

Perhaps the witty hotel men realize that there are many people contented with a slight or "light" of much food destroys the appetite.

I am obliged to sit down to an American table d'hôte, the money paid is money given away—for hunger leaves the soup is served.

The English simplicity of diet in the Jamaican seems an admirable relief in every way from American hotel fare, and yet I doubt that in five years this simplicity will have departed, and the traveler will find here the monstrous American hotel, with its Noah's Ark menu, its department store table and its colossal bill.

For the American hotel "cancer" has entered the "temple" of the Jamaican resorts, and soon the whole tent will be occupied.

So live that when they summons come to join
The innumerable caravan, that moves
To that mysterious realm, where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death.

Thou go not like the quarry slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeons, with a sullen tread,
By an unfeeling brute, approach thy grave
Like one that wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.

Edward MacDowell, an American Musician

By Henri Pene Du Bois

EDWARD MACDOWELL, it does not admit Whistler. We admire Tennyson and do not know Poe. How many persons have learned the works of MacDowell? We musicians again. How many persons have catalogues of sixty-busy, Lubinski—but MacDowell's numbers—songs, not at all, I know why. The reason is that he is, like Poe and Whistler, essentially American. He expresses by musicians abroad.

Artists vowing a cult for them have formed a MacDowell Club.

He is an American who has not made a fortune, he is hardly known. I think often of an old poet, Theodore MacDowell, who said to me: "When I am asked why I write in verse I reply, it is to amuse myself. Certainly it is not for love of laurels."

I told him that he was beautiful to court fame, and he replied: "Nobody is famous except Napoleon. I know many persons who have never heard of Homer, Virgil and Horace."

They are intelligent, they went to college, they learned many things which I have not studied. But they never heard of MacDowell. To me a favorite theory, which I formed when I was a schoolboy, is that all of those who have never heard of MacDowell if they have heard of Whistler and Poe.

The theory is that ignorance of things essentially American is profound in America. We ridicule the musician abroad as the European make. They are insignificant compared to those which we make ourselves. We admire Boungouren and Gernie in art of painting. They are world. It is distinctly American.

The summary comes to an end in this estimate. "His chief claim to perpetuity, I think it will be found, is that he has awakened in music that sense of the inviolable of the hidden wonder and enchantment behind the manifest presence of the world, which it is the signal privilege of the Celtic imagination to discover and enforce."

This Celtic imagination is in the mind of MacDowell, as in the work of MacDowell, refined, made. They are insignificant compared to those which we make ourselves. We admire Boungouren and Gernie in art of painting. They are world. It is distinctly American.
